IOL introduces forensics

Specialized psychiatry program will provide insight into court claims

It’s not “CSI” yet, but it’s a start. Identifying a growing need in medical, legal and academic circles, the Institute of Living is launching a forensic psychiatry program that will offer psychiatric expertise in a variety of civil, criminal, and legislative areas.

The new Forensic Consultation Service provides specialized services such as risk assessment, competency to stand trial evaluations, disability assessments, fitness for duty evaluations (including worker’s compensation evaluations), criminal state of mind evaluations (e.g. Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity and Extreme Emotional Disturbance defenses), evaluations of sex offenders, determination of testamentary capacities, immigration and asylum evaluations, and independent evaluations of Habeas Corpus petitions.

“We are recognizing this as a valuable service that is becoming more in demand,” said John Bonetti, DO, an IOL psychiatrist and associate director of the new service.

As an example of the kind of work the service will provide, Dr. Bonetti recently completed a lengthy evaluation of a person who had filed a claim against an employer after undergoing a traumatic experience in the workplace. Dr. Bonetti was asked to determine if the employee’s psychiatric issues could be directly linked to the workplace incident, or if the employee was already exhibiting symptoms beforehand.

Cases such as this, which involve civil claims, will make up the bulk of the new service’s workload as it establishes itself and builds a reputation, Dr. Bonetti said. In time the service hopes to expand its services to include more work in...

criminal cases, offering psychiatric expertise and other services to law enforcement or prosecutors conducting investigations.

“I think when many people hear the word ‘forensic,’ they instantly think of the “CSI” television shows and that kind of thing, but there is actually a need for this kind of service in a broad range of civil and criminal legal settings,” he said.

The American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law describes forensic psychiatry as, “a subspecialty of psychiatry in which scientific and clinical expertise is applied to legal issues in legal contexts embracing civil, criminal, and correctional or legislative matters.”

Along with Dr. Bonetti, who completed an advanced residency in forensic psychiatry at Yale University, the new service will benefit from the expertise and experience of IOL Psychiatrist-in-Chief Harold I. (Hank) Schwartz, MD and IOL psychiatrist Peter M. Zeman, MD, who is board-certified in forensic psychiatry.

The goal is for the service to become a launch pad for education of staff, trainees and patients, advocacy and policy work, academic publications and presentations, community work within the legal field and law enforcement. In addition, the service hopes to work closely with training psychiatrists, sparking interest in the field and aiding the development of some of the skills needed to practice in this sub-specialty.

The Institute of Living’s annual C. Charles Burlingame, MD, Award, one of the most prestigious annual psychiatric health awards in the nation, was bestowed upon 2016 recipient Steven S. Sharfstein, MD, at a special dinner at the Hartford Golf Club on Wednesday in which Dr. Sharfstein delivered an insightful and often humorous lecture on the future of psychiatric health systems.

Dr. Sharfstein was named the 29th recipient of the annual award after retiring as president and CEO of the Sheppard Pratt Health System in Baltimore in a career that spanned three decades as a leader and innovator in establishing modern and comprehensive centers for psychiatric care.

Dr. Sharfstein’s lecture was entitled “Mental Health System Change and Survival: A Case Study,” and he discussed the importance of remaining true to the clinical vision that lies at the heart of psychiatric centers such as the IOL, despite external pressures. He recounted a famous incident in 2005 in which movie star Tom Cruise claimed that the practice of psychiatry was unnecessary on the Today Show, and Dr. Sharfstein was asked to appear on the show to respond. “I remember saying that Tom Cruise may be a halfway decent actor, but as a doctor he is completely irresponsible,” he recalled. “So the moral of the story is that the doctor is always right, unless you’re Tom Cruise.”

Sheppard Pratt and the IOL are both members of The Ivy League of Psychiatric Hospitals, an informal organization consisting of the six remaining earliest asylums in America. Both organizations share a long history of leading service in the field; others include the Westchester Division of New York Hospital; Brattleboro Retreat in Vermont; Butler Hospital in Rhode Island; and McLean Hospital in Massachusetts.

Because of his status as a leader of one of the Ivy League institutions, Dr. Sharfstein’s selection presented an opportunity for leaders from each of the other institutions to attend the award program as part of the Ivy League’s annual leadership meeting, which has taken place every year for over a century. Leaders from each of the institutions held a meeting before going to the award dinner.

The award was presented to Dr. Sharfstein by Harold I. (Hank) Schwartz, MD, the IOL psychiatrist-in-chief, who said he was pleased that his colleagues from the other institutions could be with them.

“Together I think we represent the best of American tradition in American psychiatry,” he said.

Supporting the NEDA Walk

Staff members with the Institute of Living’s Eating Disorders Program offered informational materials and other items at a booth at the annual National Eating Disorders Association (NEDA) Walk on Oct. 22 at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain. Middle schooler named Youth Volunteer of the Year

Aamira Trimble, an eighth-grader at Woodrow Wilson Middle School in Middletown who works closely with Rushford’s prevention team, was given the Youth Volunteer of the Year Award at the annual meeting of the Middlesex County Substance Abuse Action Council last week.

Aamira received the award after being nominated by Felicia Goodwine-Vaughters, Rushford coordinator of prevention and wellness, who serves as Aamira’s advisor in developing her as a peer leader in educating her fellow students about substance abuse and mental health issues.

Among Aamira’s achievements over the past year were her participation in RAMS in Action, a peer leadership after school program in which she led Rushford prevention programs during Red Ribbon Week, National Drug Facts Week and National Prevention Week. She also conducted a focus group on marijuana and teens and took part in Pride Patrol, an anti-bullying program at the school. In addition, she participated in Rushford’s Girl Talk summer leadership program.

“Aamira’s passion for making a difference is admired. She is always ready to help out and do whatever is needed,” said Sheryl Sprague, Rushford’s prevention manager.

Nurse receives addiction specialty certification

Elizabeth Vasileff, RN, CARN, who has worked as a nurse in the detox unit at Rushford on Silver Street in Middletown for the past two years, recently passed her Certified Addictions Registered Nurse exam, making her a nursing specialist in the field of addiction medicine.

Nurses who obtain CARN certification must show demonstrated expertise in the field of addiction nursing. Specifically, the nurse who is certified has demonstrated expertise in knowledge, skill and practice that provides the context for addiction nursing.

“I have to say, being a Detox Nurse at Rushford is truly ‘real-time’ nursing. On your feet assessment skills, available medications and a word of encouragement can change despair to hope for my patients,” Vasileff said. “The clients at Rushford are good people with a bad disease. Hope paves the way to successful outcomes.”

Vasileff began her nursing career as a correctional nurse, and worked in hospital settings on acute geriatric psychiatric and inpatient units before joining the team at Rushford.

We want you at Weight Watchers

Weight Watchers meetings are being offered free of charge every week in the back room of the cafeteria at Rushford on Paddock Avenue in Meriden.

Meetings take place every Thursday beginning with an optional weigh-in at 12:15 p.m., followed by a casual and fun group meeting from 12:30 to 1 p.m. All employees are invited, and they can bring their lunch during the meeting. During the meetings the group members discuss goals and challenges that they may be facing, and then work to come up with strategic methods to overcome them.

The meeting is a great place to share tips and tricks that you have learned on your Weight Watchers journey. Hartford HealthCare will continue to offer free Weight Watchers classes at Rushford and other HHC locations in 2017.

We care about you!
